

Discover your capacity for helping groups achieve greater output while doing less yourself!

Don't Just Do Something, Stand There!

10 Principles for Leading Meetings That Matter.

An Advanced Facilitation Workshop

presents a philosophy, theory and method for transforming diverse work groups of all kinds. This seminar, integrating system change and personal growth theories is for experienced leaders who want to increase their capacity to help large, diverse groups stay task-focused and accomplish ambitious goals.

Meeting leaders have a special role in maintaining a system's task focus and boundaries. You can play this role without diagnosing behavior, interpreting what "stage" a group is in, or rushing to fix every problem that comes up. You can learn to be a "dependable authority" without acting like an authoritarian.

In this Workshop you will be introduced to ten principles for leading effective meetings.

You will learn...

- ... a simple theory, philosophy, and methods equally applicable to society, organizations, groups and ourselves.
- ... how to shift your focus away from peoples' behavior and create conditions under which people do their best without being told.
- ... how you can work on structure, which is controllable, rather than behavior, attitudes and motivation, which are not.

You will practice these perspectives in a series of learning exercises, providing a solid tool kit for managing the dynamic side of meetings AND furthering your own growth.

You are invited to join us for a dynamic learning experience with colleagues from around the world!
